DETAILED ACTION

Applicant's amendment filed 7/19/2006 has been carefully considered by the examiner.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 1-9 are allowed.

The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:

Optical waveguide tap couplers are well known in the art. Polarization dependent loss in optical waveguide tap couplers are recognized as common (although undesirable) phenomena in such devices. Various prior art devices attempt to compensate for such polarization dependent loss by providing additional waveguide coupler structures having equal and opposite polarization loss characteristic (as shown by Henry et al, U.S. Pat. # 5,539,850). More recently, various waveguide tap couplers had been developed to compensate polarization dependent loss by changing the thickness/ width of the tap waveguide. Mekis et al, U.S. Pat. # 6,915,047 B1 discloses such device.

However, none of the prior art fairly teaches or suggests an optical waveguide tap coupler, wherein the polarization dependent loss of the tap coupler is compensated by coupling a bent waveguide having predetermined dimensions as the tap waveguide. Prior art curved or bent optical waveguides are known to exhibit polarization dependent loss of their own. However, such polarization dependent losses are considered to be undesirable, and prior art teachings are directed to limiting such polarization dependent loss in order to produce polarization insensitive curved optical waveguide. For example, refer to Huang et al, U.S. Pat. # 6,522,822 B2 and Rajarajan et al. reference (Rajarajan et al. was cited in the previous office action).

Art Unit: 2874

Therefore, it would NOT have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the prior art optical waveguide tap coupler to have bent waveguides without the disclosure of the instant application. This is because the prior art teachings are directed to producing polarization insensitive bent waveguides, and NOT directed to providing opposite polarization dependent loss to compensate for the overall polarization dependent loss of the device.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
